ICE CONSUMERS PLEASE READ

As it is our earnest desire to render the very best possible service to the good people of our city, and grant special privileges to none, we would most kindly ask your indulgence in reading the following instructions in regard to ordering ice:—

Place your card, early in the morning, in the front window, with the number of pounds of ice wanted, at the top of the card, where it can be seen conveniently by the driver from the road.

Do not hang the card on the porch or outside, as the wind may blow it down and in that way you may be missed.

As soon as you receive your ice, take your card down in order to prevent confusing other drivers passing in and out of their respective territories.

If a driver should suddenly leave us or become sick, the new man taking his place would not know you wanted ice unless your card was up.

If you are missed in this way, we will be unable to serve you until the balance of the route has been served, as the other customers on that route are anxious for their ice.

We have no special wagons or men at our office to send out with ice, at once.

Our wagons make every street in the city sometime during the day, through the summer months.

It is necessary for the wagons to start early at some points and get through late at others.

If you have not been taking ice from our wagons regularly and desire ice that day, telephone our office before 9:00 a. m., and we will be pleased to have them serve you the same day.

Our terms are cash and our drivers are instructed to collect for ice on delivery. In no case do we make an exception to this rule.

If you buy our coupon books, we sell ice to you at 65 cents per hundred, but in paying cash the price for 50 pounds would be 35c, as we could not make the change for 32 1-2c, and the price for 25 pounds cash would be 20c, as we are again unable to make the change; so you see it is to your advantage to use the coupons, as well as ours.

We would kindly ask that you report to our office any irregularities or discourtesies on the part of our drivers; discourteous men will not be retained. We invite your suggestion in detail as to the improvement of our service.

It is not only possible, but probable, that a large corporation employing several men, as we do, are liable to make mistakes; help us to rectify those by calling our attention to them.

And last, but not least, remember we are human and have feelings as well as you, and it will not be necessary for you to abuse us over the phone, or our teamsters in order to secure good service.

Thanking you for your most liberal past patronage, and soliciting a continuance of the same, we are,

Yours to serve,

BIG IMPROVEMENTS IN LOCAL RAILROAD YARDS.

Workmen this morning started building a switch track that will extend almost from end to end of the local yards of the Santa Fe railroad company, and will therefore, be nearly a half mile in length. The track will run through the coal yards of the Roswell Wool & Hide Company, just east of the present tracks joining the main track near the Fourth street crossing, and will extend north to the vicinity of the round house. Near the round house the company will erect an immense coal chute, the building of which will cost $6,000. The coal chute will be at the end of the long siding that is now going in.

CATERPILLARS DAMING

THE NEW MEXICO RANGE
A new range caterpillar which was reported as damming the ranges in New Mexico has been investigated by the representative of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and a report of those observations has just been issued as Bulletin 85 Part V. Bureau of Entomology.

The first intimation of the alarming increase of Hemileuca caterpillars in northeastern New Mexico reached the Department in August 1908, and before the end of October of that year the outbreak was under the careful study of an expert. Therefore, the report covers the adult period of this depredating insect in 1908, and the entire active life period of 1909.

The history of the range caterpillar now designated as Hemileuca olivacea Cockrell, prior to this outbreak is very vague and probably owing to the fact that they have not been able to distinguish between these caterpillars and those of other species, the information furnished by ranchmen and others is unreliable. The species may have had its origin in the country east and adjacent to the Rocky Mountains in northeastern New Mexico. The first authentic history of the genus Hemileuca in New Mexico begins about five or six years ago and the section around Springer Lake, an irrigation reservoir a few miles from Springer a station on the Santa Fe Railway, 50 miles south of the Colorado line, appears to have been the starting point of the present outbreak, and from there it has spread north, east and south.

The area at present is not well defined, but it is known to extend from just north of Las Vegas, N. Mex., on the south to Las Animas, Colo., on the north and from Cimarron and Kechler, N. Mex., on the west to points within the Texas "Panhandle" on the east—or over an area 200 miles from north to south by 150 miles from east to west—comprising about 30,000 square miles.

All of this area is not evenly infested, but the insect is more or less prevalent everywhere. Counts made at widely distant points of the caterpillars present on a measured square rod showed enormous numbers present on this range, in some cases as high as 20,000,000 to the square mile, justifying, as conservative, an estimate of 1,536,000,000 caterpillars depredating on the infested area. A number capable of tremendous possibilities for harm, especially when it is remembered that the full-grown larvae frequently measures 2 1/2 inches in length with the diameter of a man's index finger, and are so numerous that one really has to choose his steps to avoid crushing the huge, spiny, ugly caterpillars. And the sensation produced when it becomes necessary to walk miles thru their myriads is both peculiar and lasting.

The bulletin treats fully of the identity, life history, natural enemies and remedial measures, and states that further observation and study will be necessary before it can be determined whether the species will retain its foothold in adjacent States to the north and east and continue to spread, or whether owing to high altitude and consequent atmospheric and meteorological conditions, it will be restricted to the particular section of the country now infested.

SAYS DOCTORS ARE ADVOCATING A TRUST.

Chicago, May 31.—Protests from Chicago and the middle West against the bureaucracy involved in the proposed federal "department of health" have been going to Washington by mail and wire in quantities that break all records since the safety appliance bills were pending in Congress, with union labor endorsement. The Owen bill advocated by the American Medical Association, which represents the allopathic medical fraternity contains one innocent looking clause which has possibilities for the crippling of any other remedial Association might fix. The protests largely were the response of the public to the disclosure made by the National League of Medical Freedom, which pointed out the absolutism which the "doctors' trust" is advocating. Even members of the American Medical Association have publicly declared that that organization has now become a "doctors' trust," a combination with ramifications into nearly every county of every state in the country, and a membership now running into hundreds of thousands. The ostensible purpose of the Owen bill is "conservation of health" through a new governmental department, but the certainty that such department will, through its operations, become autocratic as to the way the American public shall take its medicine, and what sort of medicine it shall take has stirred the public as no other pending measure has. The carefully worded Owen bill already has been set on the side track and if the public continues its fusillade of letters to members of congress who represent them at the rate they have begun it is regarded as probable that the measure will meet defeat. The various schools of medicine opposed to the allopathic and the osteopaths and the Christian Scientists, have expressed their disapproval of the proposed measure although specifically expressing willingness to co-operate in sanitation and quarantine and any reasonable precautions. Moreover, state rights are affected and many and powerful protests have proceeded from interests which see a menace to the prerogatives of the states in the probable operations of such a department as that of health.

Sale of Rare Coins.

London, May 31.—Numismatics all over the world are interested in the sale of rare coins, part of the Stroobin collection, which was commenced in London today and will continue to June 8. In the collection are many valuable pattern coins, some of which were never adopted. These coins were made for all the Continental, Asiatic, African and South American countries, and present a bewildering variety of designs in all kinds of metals—gold, silver, tin, nickel, copper, etc.

There are many examples of the minor coinage struck in the precious metals such as a German fourpennig piece of 1748 and a Hamburg shilling of 1798, both of gold.

The collection offers a particularly comprehensive series of French pattern coins, dating from the double tournois of 1615 up to the Third Republic of 1871, and even including a pattern franc, fifty twenty and ten centime pieces of the Prince Imperial which never got beyond the experimental stage.

The collection also includes mediaeval gold coins, chiefly gold florins many of which are very rare. This sale is probably the most important of its kind ever held, and presents a fine opportunity to the students of the coinages of the world.
